Set in an idyllic rural setting amidst colourful flowers, old willows and swaying trees and palms, Quinta das Barradas is the perfect place for those who wish to enjoy a family holiday away from the hustle and bustle of other resort destinations. Located in the western Algarve, just a few kilometres from the beautiful town of Lagos, this 19th century country house has been welcoming guests since 1994, when it first opened its doors in Odiáxere.

Eating local is at the heart of this restaurant, which serves dishes seasoned with herbs straight from the farm's herb garden, home-grown organic vegetables and fruit, as well as homemade jams and sauces. The result is a more rustic but beautifully presented menu, boasting with delicious flavours and complimented by a comprehensive wine list.

Seating up to 80 people, Quinta das Barradas' restaurant can also cater to weddings. Set amidst mature gardens, the country house provides the ideal venue for a cosy and intimate ceremony. Another popular highlight of the restaurant is the Friday barbecue, which takes place every Friday evening throughout the summer. A perfect way to enjoy the warm Algarvean nights, the barbecue is well-known amongst returning guests and also includes a great selection of vegetarian dishes.

Guests can also take part in the farm's activities, including fruit-picking and feeding the farm animals, from piglets and ducks to chickens, turkeys and goats. There are also activities purposely designed for children aged between 3 and 13, as well as special morning, afternoon and evening programmes to keep them entertained.

Whilst the children play, parents can enjoy the charm of the Algarvean countryside at its best by lounging by the biological rockpool or taking a walk through the estate's beautiful gardens. Activities such as horse riding or golfing in one of the many neighbouring golf courses are also available, and with the coast just a few minutes away, guests can head to one of the many sandy beaches in Lagos.
